Space and Satellite services

The Isle of Man presents a compelling business case for space and satellite related ventures and over the last six years has secured an impressive portfolio of space related businesses and initiatives. The Isle of Man Government is actively filing with the International Telecommunications Union (ITU) in Geneva, via Ofcom in the United Kingdom, for select orbital positions and associated radio frequencies. Drawn by its status as an established international financial jurisdiction, its low tax environment and state of the art telecommunications infrastructure the Island is positioned as a niche player in what is a rapidly growing global industry.

The Isle of Man has an established and successful space industry

- There are a number of well known space/satellite companies established in the Isle of Man including SES Global, Inmarsat and ManSat Limited
- The Isle of Man is home to the International Space University's International Institute of Space Commerce
- The Isle of Man is home to Odyssey Moon, the first formal entrant to the multi-million pound Google Lunar X-Prize

A renowned international jurisdiction with an attractive tax regime

The Isle of Man is recognised as an established international finance centre fully supported by a modern infrastructure:

- Proactive and collaborative regulatory regime independent of the UK
- Included in the OECD list of jurisdictions that have substantially implemented the internationally agreed tax standard (the "white list")
- Capacity for sustaining growth – the Island is enjoying its 25th consecutive year of growth
- The lowest population density in Europe giving further room for growth
- Low operating cost environment
- A policy of low taxation both for individuals and companies
- A low tax environment
- No restrictions on new residents and the Island has an open property market with no restrictions or qualifications limiting property acquisition
- Generous DTI financial packages of support to qualifying businesses
- Flexible employment and work permit provisions allowing for the relocation of business critical staff into the Island
- Legislation that provides the necessary legal framework for the space industry to grow

A leading-edge telecommunications infrastructure

With the proactive support from Government and the Island's professional community, the Isle of Man has developed a leading-edge telecommunications infrastructure which supports modern businesses.

- State of the art telecommunications infrastructure with resilient high capacity fibre optic cables
- State of the art business continuity/disaster recovery facilities widely available
- Higher speed connectivity for business available via extensive Island-wide fibre and radio networks

A zero rate of corporation tax

The Isle of Man is a common law jurisdiction and company law in the IOM is broadly similar to English company law. Isle of Man companies are subject to a 0% tax rate. Capital gains are not subject to tax. The maximum tax rate for individuals is currently 20% with an individual tax cap of £115,000.

The Isle of Man forms a common Customs area with the United Kingdom and as such a common system of VAT is applied in the Isle of Man. However, it is likely that businesses involved in the space industry will be in a position to recover VAT incurred and in most cases no VAT would be levied on income received.

No insurance premium tax

There is no insurance premium tax in the Isle of Man.
